Key words: national brand, investment attractiveness, territorial attractiveness, branding strategy, investment potential, foreign investments

In a globalized economy, the global economic crisis, city and countries began to compete with each other, including for resources in order to create a favorable image of the state in the eyes of the world community, enhance reputation, and as a result, strengthening the country’s respected position. An attractive national brand or as it is called territory branding, territorial marketing, branding places, is created a competitive marketing strategy in the process of development. This is an effective tool to attract human capital, investors, visitors, which is not used fully due to lack of understanding of the importance, effectiveness and profitability of territory branding.

Originally, the term "territory brand" was introduced in an economic science by British political consultant S. Anholt. In 2002 he created the concept of a national brand, it criteria (which includes such factors as people, power, exports, tourism, culture and heritage, investment and immigration), developed a countries ranking based on his own research. Accept S. Anholt, national brand studied other well-known foreign theorists Szondi G., Kotler, S. Raynisto. In Russia the issue was investigated in the work of A. Stas, I. Vasilenko and others.

Considering the importance of strategy formation and promotion of the country’s image through the use of national branding techniques it should be noted that in the book "Diplomacy in the context of globalization: theory and practice", the authors defines a national branding as the application of corporate marketing concepts and practices in the countries in order to enhance its reputation in the international relations [1]. The notion of the country can be created in two ways: from the personal experience in a foreign country, or indirectly, through the media, reviews, etc. Mass stereotypes often form the basis of the country’s image, for example, it is assumed that all goods produced in China have a poor quality, and the United Kingdom - the embodiment of a quality education. Sometimes these two concepts identified as a national branding (territory brand, country branding) and the image of the country. It described in the dissertations of N.A. Adrianova, Y.M. Markina, N.A. Denisova. In turn, the image of the country, can be interpreted as "a set of emotional and rational ideas derived from the signs comparison of the country’s own experience and rumors that affect the creation of a certain way".[2]

For the majority of the countries, the main problem in national brand formation is to define a national idea, and in a less degree to preserve a negative stereotypes,
